Dear Katy.
I live at Mattoon, Ill. I am 11 years old. You are my favorite comic. I don't have any brothers & sisters, but I have a little blonde cocker spaniel. Everytime I read your comic books she gets up into the chair & acts as though she is reading them too!!!!

Your friend
Sharon Oye,

Mattoon, Ill.

Dear Katy
I love you
If you want to gain another boy friend take me for one. I'd be glad to have you for a girl friend. Tell Sis that I said she was cute too. You are very, very pretty. You couldn't be any prettier.
Yours truly,

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS"

LATER, I was to realize that it was all my fault.

But now, my voice sounding strange and unfamiliar to my own ears, I flung all the pent-up resentment of the past few months at Doug, my husband. He stood just inside the door with his arms filled with flowers, looking at me in utter astonishment.

"But kid . . ." he tried to break in.

I wouldn't let him finish. "I never want to see another flower as long as I live," I stormed and my voice was shrill. "Look at those silly things you're carrying! Do you think I want flowers when we owe the gas bill and the electric bill and the telephone. Which unpaid bill do those particular daisies represent?"

Doug tried to smile. "They aren't daisies," he said mildly.

That made me madder than ever. "You're so childish," I flung at him. "Let's stick to the subject. How much did you pay for the flowers, Doug? How much!"

Doug looked defeated, and the expression sat strangely on his lean, good-humored face. "Why don't you stick to the subject?" he said. "Why don't you come right out and tell me that I can't seem to please you any more? What's happened to us, Pam?"

The flowers were crushed between us. I knew what they were. The scent of narcissus rose sickeningly to my nostrils, bringing with it a flood of memories. But how could I tell him? How could I explain? It went back so far, long before I'd met Doug, the man who was different from anyone I'd ever known.

It went back even before the time when Henry King and I had become engaged. I'd known Henry all my life. He was to be a part of my well-planned future. Some people called him stodgy, but they were the reckless ones.

That particular spring night when I met Doug was warm and humid. The carnival was in town. Henry and I hadn't planned to go, but the crowd we were with drifted over toward the sound of the calliope and the sideshow barkers. Henry was bored, and, frankly, so was I.

Until I met Doug.

He came up behind me, treading so softly on the sawdust that I heard no footsteps. I had wandered away from the others and Doug thought I was alone. "Hi, there, kid!" he said.

I whirled about, alarm showing in my widened grey eyes. Even in the uncertain light, Doug was the most fascinating man I'd ever seen!

He grinned down at me and slipped his arm under mine. It was that simple. I forgot about Henry. I forgot about everyone and everything but this enchantment which had come upon me.

When it was midnight, we still sat in the bright moonlight and Doug held my hand while he told me that I was the most wonderful, beautiful and exciting girl in all the world. I'd never thought of myself as any of those things. I was like hundreds of other girls in the small town, with slim figure, short brown hair and grey eyes. . . . Intelligent, careful of my conduct. . . . But exciting?

Yet, I believed him. I knew he was sincere because my heart recognized it. I was already in love, although I did not realize it.

He walked home with me, since Henry, unable to find me, had left, and Doug and I stopped near the entrance of the carnival where he bought the last, straggly corsage for an enormous price.

His extravagance bothered me. I wondered, fleetingly, if he could be the type my family had always warned me against. The improvident type. For Pamela Kingsley, the taboo type.

When the carnival left town, Doug stayed. I managed, through friends, to find him a job. But my family was horrified. Henry's mother stopped speaking to my mother and my mother practically stopped speaking to me. But Doug and I ran away and got married.

It didn't matter that I went to live in a tumbledown shack on the fringe of town, instead of Henry's white painted bungalow with the picket fence. Because at night I would lie in the warmth of Doug's arms and feel his heart beating out its love against my own.

Week by week, though, I noticed that bills went unpaid. Doug worked steady, but on paydays he'd always bring me some trinket, and flowers, always flowers. It worried me. My whole training had been careful, provident. My family considered it a sin to owe a bill. I began to resent Doug's way of life.

All these things rushed through my mind now, as the scent of the narcissus wove a nostalgic panorama. I realized that my desires must have reached out toward someone reckless and happy-go-lucky. And, for weeks I had been punishing my husband for the very traits that had made me fall in love with him!

"Doug," I said suddenly, "I've forgotten how much in love with you I am. Because I am in love with you, you know." I leaned closer to him, pressing against the crushed flowers, remembering the ecstasy, the thrills, the daring feeling he'd taught me, of taking a chance.

A slow smile broke over Doug's face. "Honey," he said, "I've reformed. I've been doing a lot of extra work so we'd have these bills paid that worry you so much." He let me go long enough to pull a bunch of crumpled bills all marked PAID out of his pocket.

Dear, wonderful Doug, who'd not forgotten that marriage is a compromise, marriage is a matter of give and take.

"Bring me flowers the rest of my life, Doug," I whispered, my lips against his. "Just keep on bringing me flowers. And I'll try, darling, not to nag again about paying bills."

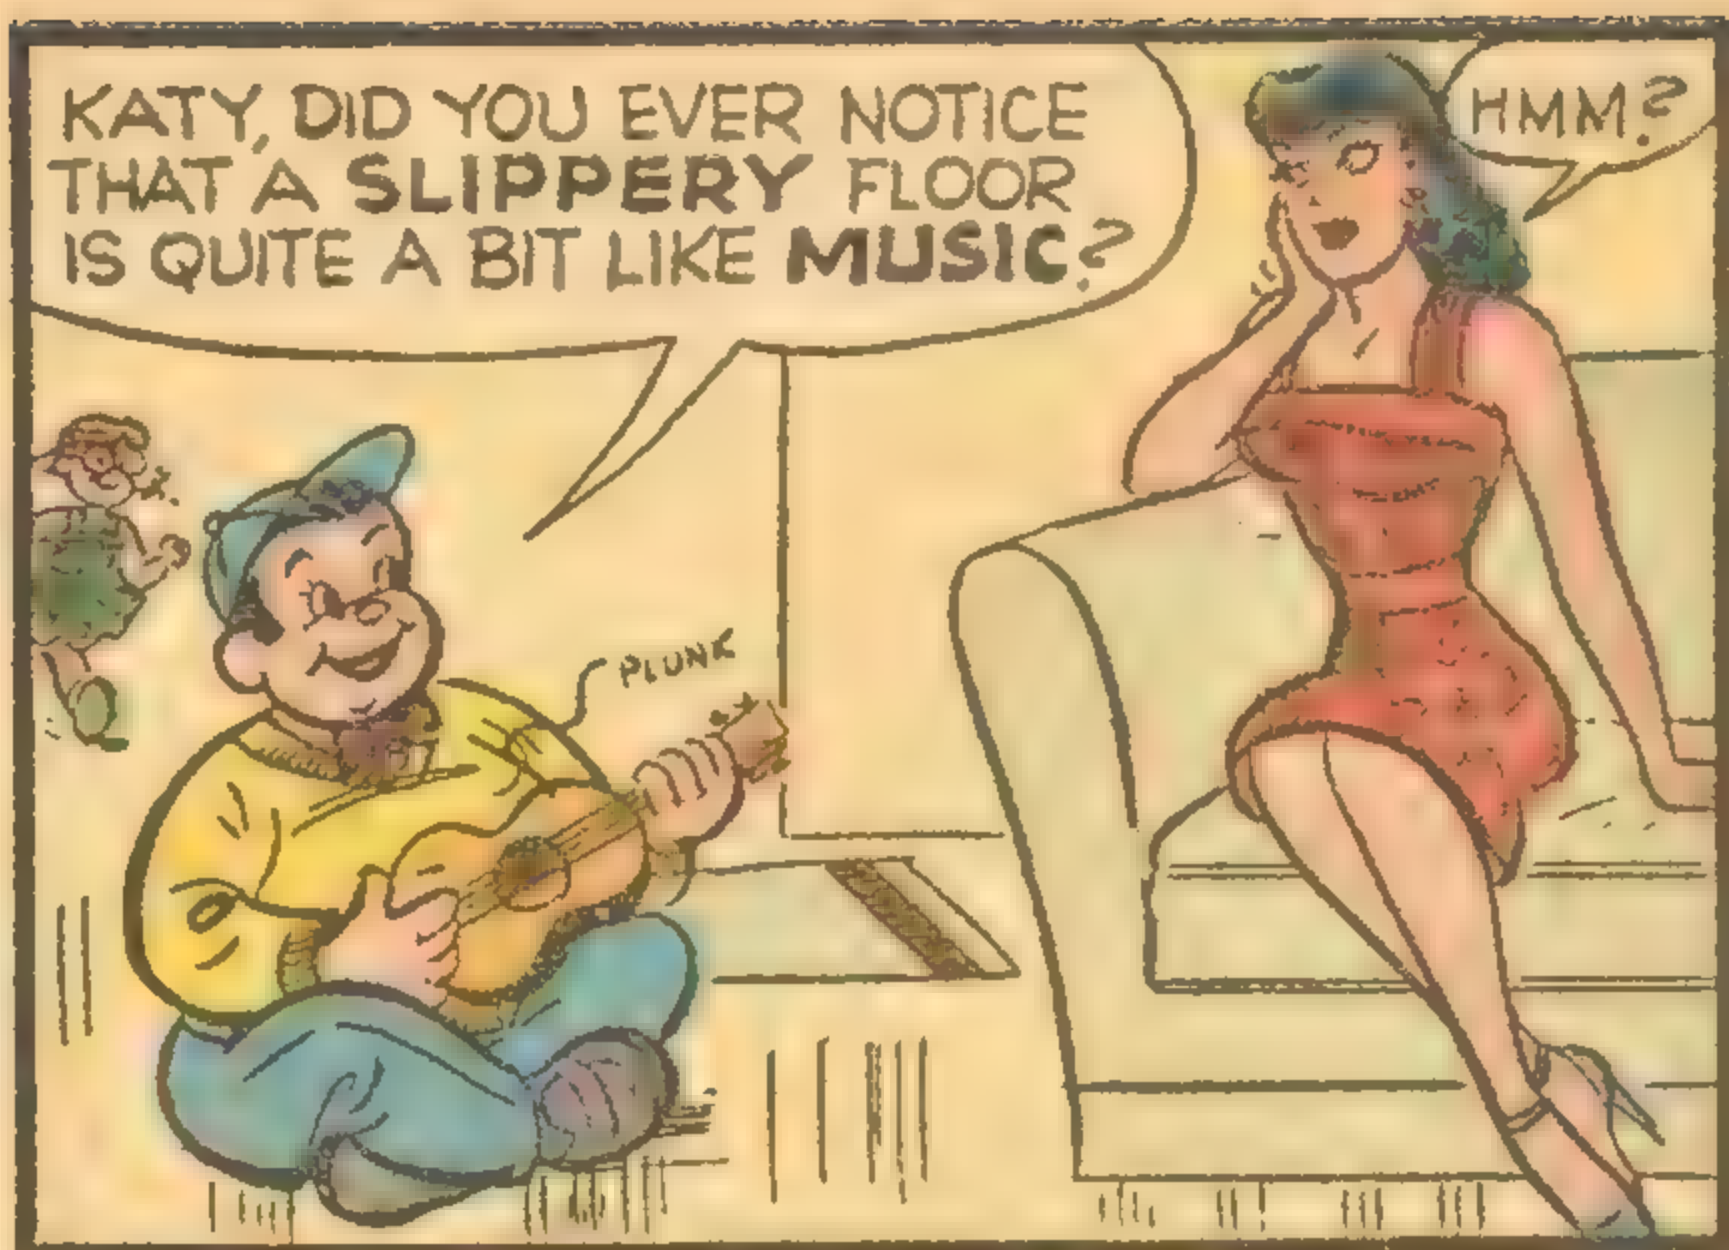

Our marriage isn't perfect. Sometimes the bills aren't paid right on time. Sometimes I flare out at Doug. But underneath we both know that everything is all right. We belong together, and I'm the happiest woman in the world.

New Amazing Values For YOU!

Manicur-ette

If you are fussy about your manicures, you will love Manicur-ette. It fits easily on your lap, on the arm of a chair or any flat surface. The deep wells for polish, cotton and remover keep them handy and steady — prevent spilling. The sloped finger ramp gives you better brush control and your polish has a professional look. Ivory or Chartreuse plastic. SEND $1.00

Leather Pilgrim Belt

This striking new contour belt of fine genuine leather is copied directly from our Pilgrim Fathers. The smart initials are a modern improvement. Sparkling brass 4" buckle and initials are dramatic on this 1½" wide belt. This is truly the "find of the year" and it will keep its handsome beauty many, many years. Natural Tan, Jet Black or Cherry Red with 2 initials.

Item No. P167—24 to 30 $2.15 ppd.
Item No. P168—32 to 40 $2.70 ppd.

Be His Glamour Girl

In A GLAMOUR TURBANG WITH REAL HAIR!

HIDE A MULTITUDE OF PINS and cover your setting curls with a TURBAN! It solves the problem that might have plagued HELEN OF TROY! (the oh-so-necessary pin curls.) Made of water-repellent cotton jersey & sports a cluster of five curls to match your own hair color. Washable—completely covers your own hair—it camouflages the peeled-onion look of a lady in curls. The real human hair is washable too and reset in a jiffy in either curls or bangs. You'll love it! You'll wear it shopping, traveling—every night of the year, and when surprised by company. A flattering turban in red, black, white, powder blue, sand beige or pink. And get an extra in a hair color you would rather have. Blond, brunette, black gray or auburn, $3.95 ppd. Send $3.95 each, check or money order to BETTER VALUES COMPANY, Dept. 618
318 Market St., Newark, N. J.
